

Interest Spreading As County Fair Opening Day Nears

With only two days remaining before grand opening of the Pickaway County Fair, public interest in the big show is spreading like wildfire.

Workmen have been busy the greater part of the week from dawn to dusk with hammer and nails constructing booths, setting up new stands, and erecting livestock pens readying the grounds for the five-day fair.

The Circleville Herald Monday will take a cue from exhibitors of prime, trophy-eligible products. . . It will publish a fat Fair Edition in which the county's leading businessmen and industries will have vital messages to tell. In addition, The Herald will carry detailed accounts of what is to be expected at the exposition which gets underway Tuesday.

Already a record-breaking attendance is hinted and fair officials are installing an additional 1,200 grandstand seats from Ross County to flank the 1,080 owned by the Pickaway County Agriculture Society.

Saturday, every member of the agricultural society was out in work duds continuing the job of readying the grounds for the big exposition.

Advance propaganda that the 1948 edition of the Pickaway County Fair would be "the greatest in history" cannot—at Saturday's rate of development—help but cease to be propaganda, but actual fact.

Many a farm truck and jeep were on the grounds as not only society officials but fair-boosting citizens as well heeded the cry of "Turn to."

Russ Palm, president of the society, was typical of the volunteers who were on hand with the preparations.

A bit stooped and a wee bleary-eyed from long days and nights on the Fairgrounds, he nevertheless pitched in with the vast amount of work yet to be done.

But he was not too tired to give a spirited call to passers-by: "She's going to be the biggest and best fair yet!"

Gates to the public exposition will open officially at 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Admission price is 50 cents for all above 12 years old; 25 cents from 7 to 12 years of age; and 25 cents for trucks and cars. Agricultural society members will be admitted on their $2 membership tickets.

Gov. Thomas J. Herbert will appear here Wednesday evening. Other celebrated visitors will include Frank Farnsworth, state director of agriculture, and Ed Bath, Ohio State Fair manager.

Top events of the Fair will be harness racing at 2 p. m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Scheduled are 10 races—five are stake events—with a $7,500 total purse.

Records show about 80 better class trotters and pacers entered for the events with trainers and drivers widely-known among local sulky followers.

More space has been made available this year for the midway, central gathering spot for concessions, ferris wheel, kiddie rides, merry-go-round, candied apples, ice cream and cold drinks.

Exhibits by educational and commercial organizations will be almost too numerous to count.

There will be a radio quiz show during the week. Columbus Station WCOL has scheduled one—complete with a batch of prizes—for 7:30 p. m. Friday.

Novel attractions slated for Friday evening include the Pickaway County song festival and Public Wedding at which time a county couple will be married in front of the grandstand.

On opening day, the WLW

Midwestern Hayride will take up most of the evening while most livestock judging contests will be held Wednesday and Thursday.

Three saddle horse shows have been listed for 2 p. m. and at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday and at 7:30 Thursday. Many city and county officials will be on hand to boom the Fair.

The Fairgrounds Coliseum will offer a variety of exhibits and displays. At least a dozen different demonstrations will be open free to the public in the big structure.

Planes Set New Record

Air Lift Roars Despite Reds

BERLIN, Sept. 11—American blockade-running cargo planes roared into Western Berlin in mounting numbers today in defiance of Soviet attempts to throttle the supply lifeline.

United States planes in the 24 hours ending at noon today flew into Berlin 3,423 tons of food and other supplies in 447 separate flights on "Operation Vittles."

This was just under the 3,527-ton air lift record set by American airmen yesterday.

There was no indication of the interference threatened by Soviet authorities.

New and drastic Russian demands for detailed information in advance of each flight were brushed aside by American authorities.

One air force official dismissed the Soviet demand for data with the brusque warning:

"NOBODY is going to push us around in the air corridor and the Russians know it."

This attitude was mirrored in Washington where the Air Force announced that Lt. Gen. Curtis Le May, USAF commander in Europe, has been given full power to block Soviet efforts to cripple the air bridge.

The British-licensed Telegraf reported today that the Soviets are reinforcing their police units in the Russian sector in the wake of an anti-Communist riot earlier this week.

Ruffian Bull Brings Law Suit

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 11—Mel McLaren, of nearby San Leandro, today sought $50,000 damages for the death of his pedigree Angus bull, slain by an alleged ruffian neighbor bull of no real background.

McLaren filed suit in Alameda County superior court here against the Zwissig Brothers Ranch. McLaren said his aristocratic bull, Barbarian of Hillcrest III, was done in by a Zwissig brothers' nonentity identified only by the brand, 9-X. The suit stated that 9-X broke in Barbarian III's pasture and mortally wounded the pedigree bull in short order.

Bus Pilot Cited In Fatal Wreck

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 11—Paul E. Hickey, 25-year-old driver of a Greyhound bus involved in a fatal crash near Kinnikinnick Sept. 3, was under $1,000 bond on a second-degree manslaughter charge today.

Hickey pleaded innocent when arraigned in municipal court here yesterday. A preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 27 by Judge E. A. Moats.

A six-year-old girl was killed and 11 other passengers injured when the bus crashed through a bridge.

PREMIER QUEUILLE

Queuille Tries Bringing Unity To Torn France

PARIS, Sept. 11—Premier Henri Queuille—approved 351 to 196 by parliament—plunged into the task today of forming a new cabinet to wrestle with France's grave economic problems.

The 64-year-old physician and veteran politician of the Radical Socialist (Centrist) Party received the support of his own party, the powerful Socialists, other center parties and even some followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

He needs 311 votes to win approval of a new cabinet. He will be the fourth to hold office in the past seven weeks during the most protracted cabinet crisis since the liberation.

Queuille will attempt to treat France's economic and financial ills with much the same remedies which resulted in downfall of his predecessors.

He is expected to oppose increasingly vigorous union demands for wage boosts to offset inflationary trends. At the same time he will apparently try to lower food prices and other consumer goods prices.

Odd Bird-Fall In Gotham Has Experts Baffled

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Hundreds of small birds of sparrow size fell dead and dying into the streets around the Empire State Building this morning.

Police and representatives of the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were baffled by the phenomenon.

The birds were of a variety of striped, some of almost solid green, blue and brown tones.

One initial theory was that the birds, flying northeast, had struck the side of the 102-story building.

Another was they they had been poisoned in some way, perhaps by something they had eaten in migration.

The baffling bird-fall began just before midnight and continued for several hours.

Diplomats Alerted

Growing Berlin Tension Eyed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—Top State department officials were alerted for any possible weekend developments today as news from Berlin showed ever-growing tension.

Secretary of State Marshall and his top advisers planned to make themselves available around the clock.

Attention centered chiefly about Soviet threats of interference with the air lift by which about 4,500 tons of food are flown into the former German capital daily.

Plans for an all-out Communist demonstration on Sunday—to outperform that of anti-Reds Thursday—carried the implied danger of a spark which might set off the powder keg of Berlin.

The experience of recent weeks, and particularly the sorry breakdown of the negotiations among the four Allied military commanders, have all but removed every vestige of hope that the situation can be remedied.

OFFICIALS were silent on the delicate situation, but it was felt in Washington that the New York statement of Sen. Vandenberg, (R) Mich., promising a GOP policy of no retreat, echoed State department sentiments.

Other developments of the past week that revealed the Western attitude were:

1. President Truman's session with cabinet members of the National Security Board immediately on his return from his Labor Day campaign trip.

2. A closed session of top brass at the Pentagon at which Marshall explained the dangerous potentialities of the situation.

3. The special session of the British cabinet which was serious.

Soviet Army Size Lauded

BERLIN, Sept. 11—The Soviet propaganda chief in Berlin delivered a blistering speech to German Communists today and said that "force is the only answer" to the Western Allies.

The speaker was Col. Serge Tulpanov, long in obscurity on the Berlin scene and believed to have been dismissed by his superiors.

He made a reappearance in troubled Berlin to address the Soviet-sponsored "Congress of the Victims of Fascism" in advance of a huge Communist mass demonstration scheduled for tomorrow.

Tulpanov blamed "the instigation of Anglo-Americans" for recent riots in Berlin. He said:

"With United States Ku Klux Klan methods, the Red flag was torn from the Brandenburg gate. All this is in preparation for a new war."

"The power of the Soviet Union will smash all who intend to build a Fourth Reich on the principles of the Third Reich (the Hitler regime)."

"NO ARMY has such experience in battle as the Red army. No army has so many allies in the whole world."

"I know I am not speaking diplomatically but the events of the last few days have shown that force is the only answer."

The Soviet press meanwhile gave tremendous advance publicity to tomorrow's demonstration.

Atomic Spy Case Stalled

'Grave' Situation Noted By Panel

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—Congressional spy investigators said today that "grave" developments in their atomic espionage case may postpone public hearings set for next Wednesday.

The second postponement in the open hearings was threatened after the House UnAmerican Activities Committee questioned Lt. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, ex-chief of the atom bomb project, and three other former Manhattan District employees.

Rep. Thomas, (R) N. J., committee chairman, recessed closed door hearings at which Groves appeared until Monday.

Another committee member declared that the testimony to date on alleged Soviet attempts to steal atomic secrets had developed a situation "which can be described as grave."

Groves suggested that news-men read up on the Canadian spy report when he was asked whether there had been "leaks" on the nation's atomic secrets. He added:

"If you have over 600,000 employees, as we did, are all 600,000 going to be perfect? Security depends on integrity. The conclusion is obvious. Anyone who thinks you can get 600,000 perfect people just isn't intelligent."

108 Men Signed Friday For Draft

Pickaway County draft board Friday registered 108 men in the 21-year age group setting a new record for the largest number of conscripts signed up in a single day.

Yanks Unified Despite Polls, Dewey Warns

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey warned today that America is determined to protect its "rights everywhere" and stands united against "foes of freedom" despite inevitable election campaign differences.

The Republican presidential candidate's views were expressed through a statement handed reporters by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee.

Vandenberg gravely informed nations "which do not understand our political system" that they should not be "misled by our political campaign at home." He added:

"We shall be in internal controversy regarding many phases of foreign policy. But we shall not be in controversy over the basic fact that America is united against aggression and against the foes of freedom."

The emergency meeting emphasized the seriousness with which the GOP high command and views the current world situation.

Death Valley Heat Recorded

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—The Army decided today that Death Valley, Calif., is the hottest place this side of you know where.

At least it is the hottest spot in North America. The Army started checking Death Valley temperatures in a test for hot weather clothing.

It found that on at least one day every seven years the temperature goes up to 180 on the desert floor. But the mercury drops 55 degrees to a mere 125 at five feet above ground, where official temperatures are recorded. At that level it once got up to 134, and during the week of July 7-14, 1913, it never got below 127.

Record Food Crops Seen

Effect On Retail Level Said Nil

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—Record-smashing food crops in the United States were expected today to have little immediate effect on retail food prices.

Across the nation, government reports indicate bumper, or at least above average, yields of everything from corn to cucumbers.

With small grains practically out of the way, farmers can give their full attention to harvesting the later-maturing corn crop which the Department of Agriculture predicts will hit a historic high of 3,528,815,000 bushels.

This is about 22 million bushels above the estimate a month ago. Corn prices already are dropping in the face of earlier forecasts of a record yield.

CORN IS regarded as the key to the whole retail price structure, but it will take time to translate this year's huge crop into larger meat supplies.

Agriculture officials noted that the estimated production of all crops is nine index points above the previous record set in 1946 and now stands at 135 per cent of the 1923-32 base.

In addition to corn, three other crops—peanuts, soybeans and pecans—are expected to set new production records this year.

The forecast also calls for near record outturns of wheat, oats, rice, grain sorghums, dry beans, citrus fruits and flaxseed.

Above average yields are expected for cotton, barley, hay, potatoes, tobacco, sugar cane, sugar beets, hops, peaches, grapes, cherries and apricots.

Housewives were told to expect liberal supplies of most vegetables for the rest of this year. The overall yield is expected to be at least one-tenth above last year.

PERCHED ON A FLAGPOLE in a San Francisco, Cal., used car lot for 42 days in effort to break a 16-year-old flagpole sitting record, ex-paratrooper Milton van Nolan, 22, thought he might have to quit seven days short of the mark to register for the draft. But the fire department put up a ladder for Judge Thomas Foley to register Nolan. Fire Chief Carl Kruger is moral support.

Diamond Thief Eludes Capture

COLUMBUS, Sept. 11—An intensive police search was continued in the vicinity of Columbus today for a man who stole diamonds valued at $11,045 from a jewelry store.

The man, described as about 28 years old, tall and thin with brown hair, scooped up five unmounted diamonds yesterday afternoon from a display at the Harrington Co., one of the city's most prominent jewelers.

He was followed from the store by a clerk, Burr E. Reed, but eluded his pursuer in a chase through the downtown area.

and impending marriage but if she knew any of the details she wasn't talking.

At LaGuardia field, Stephanie shooed reporters away from the plane she boarded for Florida, reportedly en route to a Sunday wedding in Miami.

In response to a request, she bared her left hand to show that she was not wearing a big diamond engagement ring Hitchcock was rumored to have given her.

IT WAS learned that Stephanie hates to be compared to the year's first Cinderella—Barbara (Bobo) Sears—another Pennsylvania coal miner's daughter who made the front pages with her marriage to a Rockefeller.

Mrs. Turk, who married Coal Miner Steve Turk after the death of her first husband, said she first learned of her daughter's plans through Stephanie herself when the girl visited her home town Labor Day weekend.

Mrs. Turk still lives in the home in which Stephanie was born. Directly across the street stands a huge slag pile and 300 yards down the dirt street is a mine tippie.

Mrs. Turk said that the family has always been "very, very poor," and that Stephanie—apparently dissatisfied with life in the mining town—left for New York in 1943 as soon as she finished high school.

The postmaster's job will be vacated Oct. 31 when the 77-year-old incumbent, Nathan A. McCoy, becomes eligible for retirement.

viet-indoctrinated German prisoners of war will assume key roles in the Russian sector police force Sept. 13.

To the west of Berlin near Frankfurt, Anglo-American combat units completed the first phase of maneuvers against a potential enemy "from the east."

London reports said that the British cabinet today ordered its special Moscow envoy to seek another early meeting with Russian leaders on the Berlin situation and to bring the "Communist terror" to the attention of the Kremlin chiefs.

The Moscow talks recessed when the question of East-West differences in Berlin were referred to the military governors in Berlin.

London newspapers said the reason for the recess in the Berlin talks was that Russia has increased conditions for an agreement to lift the blockade.

Ex-Councilman Arrested Again

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11—Thomas J. Davis, whose Cleveland home was bombed early this week, was held by suburban Bedford police today, charged with promoting a gambling game.

Davis was arrested yesterday hiding in a closet in a Bedford clearing house. He was caught with three other Clevelanders, who also were charged with carrying on a scheme of chance.

Detective Lt. Martin P. Conroy said that Davis, an ex-councilman, now faces a one-to-seven year felony term as a second offender under the state law.

Term Suspended In Contempt Case

Judge William D. Radcliff ordered the defendant to make $20 per week payments as part of the court's original decree plus an additional $10 per week to be applied to the back payments.

Barnabas, a Good Man

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Acts 4:32-37; 9:26-31; 11:22-30; 12:25-13:7; 43-52; 14:1-20; 15:1-39; 1 Corinths 9:6; Galatians 2:1-13; Colossians 4:10.

Barnabas, one of the apostles, sold his land, brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet, for they had all things in common, and distribution was given to each man as he had need.

When Paul first came to the brethren in Jerusalem, they were afraid of him because he had previously persecuted Christians, but Barnabas brought him to the apostles and vouched for him.

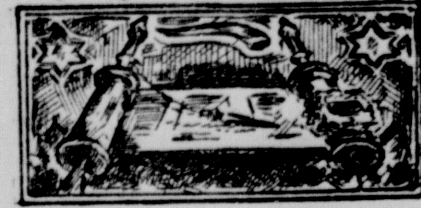

A report concerning the church at Antioch came to Jerusalem, and the apostles sent Barnabas there, "for he was a good man," and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith, and many were converted.

Barnabas brought Saul to Antioch, and word came from the Holy Ghost to send Barnabas and Saul on a missionary journey, so the two went on their way. MEMORY VERSE—I John 3:18.

Barnabas, a Good Man

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Acts 4:32-37; 9:26-31; 11:22-30; 12:25-13:7, 43-52; 14:1-20; 15:1-39; 1 Corinthians 9:6; Galatians 2:1-13; Colossians 4:10.

Barnabas, one of the apostles, sold his land, brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet, for they had all things in common, and distribution was given to each man as he had need.

When Paul first came to the brethren in Jerusalem, they were afraid of him because he had previously persecuted the Christians, but Barnabas brought him to the apostles and vouched for him.

A report concerning the church at Antioch came to Jerusalem, and the apostles sent Barnabas there, for he was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith, and many were converted.

Barnabas brought Saul to Antioch, and word came from the Holy Ghost to send Barnabas and Saul on a missionary journey, so the two went on their way. MEMORY VERSE—I John 3:15.

LARD AND PEANUTS

AMERICANS are apt to think once a paper is signed agreeing to some plan that the plan is already an accomplished fact. But it does not work that way. People overseas are getting more and better food now, but it is still dull and unappetizing, says an English visitor to the Homemaker of the Toronto Globe and Mail.

One can get fish, she says, by standing in line. But the only way to cook it is by boiling; there is never any fat for frying. She urges friends on this side to include lard in their packets. It carries fine in the carton, she says. The Homemaker doubts this in hot weather, but thinks it a good idea after first frost. Pancake flour is another thing the English like to get—any of the mixes. Coconut in packages and prepared puddings are wanted, too. Tinned lemon juice they long for and powdered eggs from here taste better.

Friends in Holland write they are not starving any more, and clothing may be procured. But coupons or money or both are likely to be short when something desirable appears on a store shelf, so they still do appreciate everything they get, especially peanut butter and peanut candy. These taste so good and there seems so much nourishment in them! Doubtless people of other countries would like them, too. Shoes are still of top-notch value.

Reconstruction does go on. Conferences proceed and misunderstandings still arise, but day by day things do get better. For some time yet, however, our boxes will delight the faraway friends.

So put the lard carton in a tin and add a tin of coffee. And don't forget the merits of the lemon and the peanut.

DISCOVERIES OF AMERICA

COLUMBUS did not discover America. Most school children know that the Norsemen, under Leif Ericsson, visited this continent, calling it Vinland, about 1000 A. D. That is about all that is known. Where did the Norsemen go, and how long did they stay?

A Danish archaeologist, Prof. Johannes Brønden of Copenhagen, is visiting the United States in the endeavor to answer these questions. The Viking Fund, a New York foundation, is financing his trip. He will examine the stone tower at Newport, R. I., which some think is Norse and some a seventeenth century English building, and the stone of Kensington, Minn., which is now thought to contain a runic Norse inscription. There are other disputed sites which he will examine. He will spend two or three months on the task, and publish his findings next year.

A new page in American history may be opened by Prof. Brønden's investigations. We shall know before long.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

To what extent need any American be grateful to a President, Governor, Member of Congress? After all, these men are servants of the people, paid out of taxes, performing their duties in accordance with the law and their oaths of office. If they perform their tasks so that the whole people or any segment of it are pleased, we must assume that the officials only did what they believed to be right and for the welfare of the country.

It is therefore difficult to understand the following paragraphs in Mr. Truman's acceptance speech, which need to be considered in relationship with his oath of office. Mr. Truman said:

"Never in the world were the farmers of any republic or any kingdom or any other country as prosperous as the farmers of the United States and if they don't do their duty by the Democratic Party, they are the most ungrateful people in the world."

"And now, what I have said to the farmer I will say to (labor): They are the most ungrateful people in the world if they pass the Democratic Party by this year."

In a word, whatever Mr. Truman did for those whom he calls labor and the farmers, American citizens, he did to win and hold their gratitude. He did not function as President of the United States, for the general welfare, dealing with current problems, but rather as the leader of a political party and a potential candidate.

That may be a way of conducting the presidency, but it is not a good way. American citizens, whatever their occupation, whether hourly laborers or bankers, farmers or school teachers or anybody else, have the constitutional right to press for legislation, to oppose legislation, to favor or disapprove whatever is done by the President or by Congress, to petition for redress of grievances.

When the President vetoes a measure he should do so because his sense of right and conscience so dictate. When Congress passes a measure over his veto, that is constitutionally permissible and the President has nothing to do with it.

Nobody owes any gratitude to anybody. The farmers of this country owe nothing to the Democratic Party or to the Republican Party. The farmers of this country, as citizens, individually employ public officials who are obligated to them to perform their tasks honestly and constitutionally. It is possible that the farmers will decide that one official is good for the country and another is not. But he owes neither of them anything.

If the President of the United States were to function only in the interest of the farmers, it would not be long before the farmer would be in real trouble because once the economic balance of the country is disturbed, we are bound to have a serious depression. The farmer is not dependent upon the government as much as he is upon the general welfare of the whole population, which must buy his produce and have the money with which to buy it.

Similarly the hourly worker is dependent upon the total prosperity of the country. When the farmer does not buy washing machines, automobiles and nails, the worker's income is reduced. If the professional and office workers find themselves squeezed between high prices and high taxes, their purchasing power goes down and the worker suffers.

DIET AND HEALTH

Preventive Treatment for Painful Migraine Headache

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MIGRAINE headache has been called the most common complaint of civilized people. However this may be, migraine is a frequent complaint, shown by special studies to affect about eight out of every hundred persons.

Migraine, like asthma and a number of other ailments, comes on in periodic bouts. The chief symptom is one-sided headache, accompanied by irritability, sickness at the stomach, vomiting, and constipation or diarrhea. While the pain is usually confined to one side of the head, it may shoot downward into both face and neck.

Attack Renewed

An attack of migraine can be promptly relieved by doses of a drug known as ergotamine tartrate given either by mouth or injection into a muscle. The earlier in the course of an attack the preparation is given, the more rapidly is relief obtained. After the ergotamine is administered, the patient should rest in bed for about two hours. It is better to remain in a dark, quiet room and to take no food or liquids. An ice-bag placed on the head is helpful.

While an attack of migraine may be cut short by this treatment, it is a more difficult matter to prevent an attack or to lengthen the intervals between them. Diet does not seem to be a factor of particular importance in this disease, although there may be a few migraine victims who are allergic or sensitive to certain food. In such cases, of course, the foods which cause difficulty should be avoided.

Most patients with migraine are intense, driving personalities, who use up a great deal of energy during periods of strain and become over-fatigued. At bottom they suffer from feelings of insecurity which drive them to seek perfection in all that they do. Their high standards for themselves and others lead to easy dissatisfaction about their family finances and personal life. Thus, these individuals are predisposed to migraine both by their physical and mental make-up. In order to prevent the attacks, it is necessary that the patient understand the underlying cause of his trouble.

Treatment includes reassurance, suggestions, and re-education. In other words, the patient must often alter his manner of living. He must be given details of the manner in which he should conduct his work and the time he should take for relaxation and rest. He must be taught to conserve his energy and not waste it in futile brooding and worry for here, as elsewhere, he does a thorough job. After periods of increased work, he should have rest and recreation.

During the first week of this preventive program, the patient may be given phenobarbital, but this drug should not be continued the second week. The drug is used only to aid the patient in changing his habits.

In many instances, migraine disappears after the ages of 45 to 50. This may occur because with increasing age there is a decline in nervous tension. However, in a few instances, middle age may bring increasing difficulties in adjustment to surroundings, with the result that the migraine becomes worse instead of better.

RISKS AT MOST STAGES

THROUGHOUT the bidding and play of any close hand, we are taking risks of one kind or another in order to gain something. It is a good deal like the American system of competitive business, which really should be called the "profit and loss" system rather than the "profit system," since he who risks his all to launch a new project takes a chance of dropping it as well as of winning. Just as no businesses could ever be developed, to make jobs for employees, except through such courageous chance-taking, so nothing can be gained in contract bridge except by venturing on one kind or another.

M. G. Murray, of the home town, and Charles Sherman, a

Winter visitor from New York, won a top on this duplicate deal in one of the tournaments at St. Petersburg, Fla. Speaking through an early diamond trick enabled Mr. Murray to do it.

West opened the club A and shifted to the spade 3, which the K won to drop the Q. When the diamond 2 was led promptly from dummy, East was certain to be taking a risk, no matter what he did. If he came in with the A, he would set up the Q, perhaps for an important discard of one of South's losers. He knew he was taking still another risk when he played low, as he did.

The K took that trick, and the diamond A was eventually shut out altogether. Mr. Murray followed with the heart A and K, the heart 6 ruffed by the spade 4 to set up the heart remainder, then the spade A and J, leaving the good 10 out. Next he led to the club Q and brought forth the heart 10 from dummy. As he discarded the diamond 6 on it to render East's A worthless, West could get only one trick with his spade 10. The last three tricks went to the spade 6 and 5 and club K, producing an extra trick.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

POIROT'S FACE took on a curious expression. Lynn misunderstood it. She cried out:
"Oh don't you see, M. Poirot, it's all so difficult. It isn't a question of David at all. It's me! I've changed. I've been away for three—four years. Now I've come back. That's the tragedy everywhere. People coming home changed, having to readjust themselves. You can't go away and lead a different kind of life and not change!"

She stared at him, shaking her head. He insisted:
"But yes, it is so. Why did you go away in the first place?"

"Why? I went into the Wrens. I went on service."

"Yes, yes, but why did you join the Wrens in the first place? You were engaged to be married. You were in love with Rowley Cloade. You could have worked, could you not, as a Land girl, here in Warmingale Vale?"

"I could have, I suppose, but I wanted—"

"You wanted to get away. You wanted to go abroad to see life. You wanted, perhaps, to get away from Rowley Cloade. . . . And now, you are restless, you still want to get away! Oh no, Made-moiselle, people do not change!"

"When I was out East, I longed for home," Lynn cried defensively. "Yes, yes, where you are not, there you will want to be! That will always be so, perhaps, with you. You make a picture, to yourself, you see, a picture of Lynn Marchmont coming home. . . . But the picture does not come true, because the Lynn Marchmont whom you imagine is not the real Lynn Marchmont. She is the Lynn Marchmont you would like to be."

Lynn asked bitterly:
"So, according to you, I shall never be satisfied anywhere?"

"I do not say that. But I do say that, when you went away, you were dissatisfied with your engagement, and that now you have come back, you are still dissatisfied with your engagement."

Lynn broke off a leaf and chewed it meditatively.
"You're rather a devil at knowing things, aren't you, M. Poirot?"

"It is my métier," said Poirot modestly. "There is a further truth, I think, that you have not yet recognized."

Lynn said sharply:
"You mean David, don't you? You think I am in love with David?"

"That is for you to say," murmured Poirot discreetly.
"And I—don't know! There's something in David that I'm afraid of—but there's something that draws me, too. . . ." She was silent.

a moment and then went on: "I was talking yesterday to his Brigadier. He came down here when he heard David was arrested to see what he could do. He's been telling me about David, how incredibly daring he was. He said David was one of the bravest people he'd ever had under him. And yet, you know, and his praise, I had the feeling that he wasn't sure, not absolutely sure that David hadn't done this!"

"And you are not sure, either?" Lynn gave a crooked rather pathetic smile.

"No—you see, I've never trusted David. Can you love someone you don't trust?"

"Unfortunately, yes."

"I've always been unfair to David—because I didn't trust him. I've believed quite a lot of the beastly local gossip—hints that David wasn't David Hunter at all—but just a boy friend of Rosaleen's. I was ashamed when I met the Brigadier and he talked to me about having known David as a boy in Ireland."

"C'est épatant," murmured Poirot, "how people can get hold of the wrong end of a stick!"

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. Tell me, did Mrs. Cloade, the doctor's wife, I mean, did she ring you up on the night of the murder?"

"Aunt Kathie? Yes, she did."

"Some incredible muddle she had got into over some accounts."

"Did she speak from her own house?"

"Why, no, actually her telephone was out of order. She had to go out to a call box."

"At ten minutes past ten?"

"Thereabouts. Our clocks never keep particularly good time."

"Thereabouts," said Poirot thoughtfully. He went on delicately:
"That was not the only telephone call you had that evening?"

"No," Lynn spoke shortly. "David Hunter rang you up from London?"

"Yes," she flared out suddenly. "I suppose you want to know what he said?"

"Oh, indeed I should not presume—"

"You're welcome to know. He said he was going away—clearing out of my life. He said he was no good to me and that he never would run straight—not even for my sake."

"And since that was probably true you did not like it," said Poirot.

"I hope he will go away—that is, if he gets acquitted all right. . . . I hope they'll both go away to America or somewhere. Then, perhaps, we shall be able to stop thinking about them—we'll learn to stand on our own feet. We'll stop feeling ill will."

"Ill will?"

"Yes. I felt it first one night at Aunt Kathie's. She gave a sort of party. Perhaps it was because I was just back from abroad and rather on edge—but I seemed to feel it in the air eddying all round us. Ill will to her—to Rosaleen. Don't you see, we were wishing her dead—all of us! Wishing her dead. . . . And that's awful, to wish that someone who's never done you any harm—may die—"

"Her death, of course, is the only thing that can do you any good," Poirot spoke in a brisk and practical tone.

"You mean do us good financially? Her mere being here has done us harm in all the ways that matter! Envyng a person, resenting them, caddling off them—it isn't good for one. Now, there she is, at Furrowbank, all alone. She looks like a ghost—she looks scared to death—she looks—oh! looks as though she's going off her head. And she won't let us help! Not one of us. We've all tried. Mums asked her to come and stay with us, Aunt Frances asked her here. Even Aunt Kathie went along and offered to be with her at Furrowbank. But she won't have anything to do with us now and I don't blame her. She wouldn't even see Brigadier Conroy. I think she's ill, ill with worry and fright and misery. And we're doing nothing about it because she won't let us."

"Have you tried? You yourself?"

"Yes," said Lynn. "I went up there yesterday. I said, was there anything I could do? She looked at me— Suddenly she broke off and shivered. 'I think she hates me. She said, 'You least of all. David told her, I think, to stop on at Furrowbank, and she always does what David tells her. Rowley took her up some eggs and butter from Long Willows. I think he's the only one of us she likes. She thanked him and said he'd always been kind. Rowley, of course, is kind."

"There are people," said Poirot, "for whom one has great sympathy—great pity, people who have too heavy a burden to bear. For Rosaleen Cloade I have great pity. If I could, I would help her. Even now, if she would listen—"

With sudden resolution he got to his feet.

"Come, Mademoiselle," he said. "Let us go up to Furrowbank."

"You want me to come with you?"

"If you are prepared to be generous and understanding—"

Lynn cried:
"I am—indeed I am . . ."

Up to a glorious morning, so soon outside and wondering just why I was not out on the banks of Deer Creek where the bass are said to be stuffing against the lean days of Winter. In the roadway did see a possum that had lost an argument with an auto. Second such in the last ten days at that spot. Never others until this two. Saw only one of the pair of doves that have been feeding in the yard all Fall. Just the hen. Probably had had a bad night and was sleeping in. Turned inside for coffee and in the chill of the morning headed downtown.

About the streets to meet up with A. V. Osborne, the N and W agent, who gave me the bad news that a Timken plant for which the ville had been considered as a site, has been located at Kenton. Nearer Detroit was the reason given, most of Timken's products going to the auto city.

Chatted with Don Watt, the realtor, and found we were in accord on the need for at least 200 more new houses here. A record number constructed or under construction, but the surface has not been scratched. Soon after did see a statement of fact that may be part of the answer to the housing shortage. Last year citizens of the U. S. paid more in taxes than they spent all told on homes, cars, furniture, religious and charitable donations, private education, medical care and funerals.

Noted a news story in which Ray C. Kirkpatrick, director of labor relations of the Federal Works Agency was quoted as saying Ohio has taken a great stride forward in river pollution control and water conservation by joining the eight-state Ohio River Valley Sanitation Compact. Maybe so, but certainly none of the striding has been done along the Scioto south of Columbus. And if any of the striding is done in our direction then the striders had better wear gas masks, especially if they come down 104. Talk about Hawg Cricks! All Summer long the Scioto was so polluted that it did not flow, it just rolled along. There's subject for a good campaign promise by one of the candidates for governor. No one would expect early fulfillment any more than they expect recognition of pledges for early establishment of Memorial lake. But the promise might swing a few votes.

Joseph Rooney, 6, lost a tooth and was mighty proud of the defunct chopper, carrying it constantly and showing it off as often as opportunity offered. Other attempts at obtaining possession meeting with failure, Joe, the city service director, told his son that when he was a kid and a tooth came out that he put the tooth under his pillow at night and that a fairy would come and replace the tooth with a dime. Seemed like a fair deal to young Joe and he put the tooth under his pillow. Dad put a dime under the pillow,

That may be a way of conducting the presidency, but it is not a good way. American citizens, whatever their occupation, whether hourly laborers or bankers, farmers or school teachers or anybody else, have the constitutional right to press for legislation, to oppose legislation, to favor or disapprove whatever is done by the President or by Congress, to petition for redress of grievances.

When the President vetoes a measure he should do so because his sense of right and conscience so dictate. When Congress passes a measure over his veto, that is constitutionally permissible and the President has nothing to do with it.

Nobody owes any gratitude to anybody. The farmers of this country owe nothing to the Democratic Party or to the Republican Party. The farmers of this country, as citizens, individually employ public officials who are obligated to them to perform their tasks honestly and constitutionally. It is possible that the farmers will decide that one official is good for the country and another is not. But he owes neither of them anything.

If the President of the United States were to function only in the interest of the farmers, it would not be long before the farmer would be in real trouble because once the economic balance of the country is disturbed, we are bound to have a serious depression. The farmer is not dependent upon the government as much as he is upon the general welfare of the whole population, which must buy his produce and have the money with which to buy it.

Similarly the hourly worker is dependent upon the total prosperity of the country. When the farmer does not buy washing machines, automobiles and nails, the worker's income is reduced. If the professional and office workers find themselves squeezed between high prices and high taxes, their purchasing power goes down and the worker suffers.

DIET AND HEALTH

Preventive Treatment for Painful Migraine Headache

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MIGRAINE headache has been called the most common complaint of civilized people. However this may be, migraine is a frequent complaint, shown by special studies to affect about eight out of every hundred persons.

Migraine, like asthma and a number of other ailments, comes on in periodic bouts. The chief symptom is one-sided headache, accompanied by irritability, sickness at the stomach, vomiting, and constipation or diarrhea. While the pain is usually confined to one side of the head, it may shoot downward into both face and neck.

Attack Renewed

An attack of migraine can be promptly relieved by doses of a drug known as ergotamine tartrate given either by mouth or injection into a muscle. The earlier in the course of an attack the preparation is given, the more rapidly is relief obtained. After the ergotamine is administered, the patient should rest in bed for about two hours. It is better to remain in a dark, quiet room and to take no food or liquids. An ice-bag placed on the head is helpful.

While an attack of migraine may be cut short by this treatment, it is a more difficult matter to prevent an attack or to lengthen the intervals between them. Diet does not seem to be a factor of particular importance in this disease, although there may be a few migraine victims who are allergic or sensitive to certain foods. In such cases, of course, the foods which cause difficulty should be avoided.

Most patients with migraine are intense, driving personalities, who use up a great deal of energy during periods of strain and become over-fatigued. At bottom they suffer from feelings of insecurity which drive them to seek perfection in all that they do. Their high standards for themselves and others lead to easy dissatisfaction about their family finances and personal life. Thus, these individuals are predisposed to migraine both by their physical and mental make-up. In order to prevent the attacks, it is necessary that the patient understand the underlying cause of his trouble.

Treatment includes reassurance, suggestions, and re-education. In other words, the patient must often alter his manner of living. He must be given details of the manner in which he should conduct his work and the time he should take for relaxation and rest. He must be taught to conserve his energy and not waste it in futile brooding and worry for here, as elsewhere, he does a thorough job. After periods of increased work, he should have rest and recreation.

During the first week of this preventive program, the patient may be given phenobarbital, but this drug should not be continued the second week. The drug is used only to aid the patient in changing his habits.

In many instances, migraine disappears after the ages of 45 to 50. This may occur because with increasing age there is a decline in nervous tension. However, in a few instances, middle age may bring increasing difficulties in adjustment to surroundings, with the result that the migraine becomes worse instead of better.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

RISKS AT MOST STAGES

THROUGHOUT the bidding and play of a close hand, we are taking risks of one kind or another in order to gain something. It is a good deal like the American system of competitive business, which really should be called the "profit and loss" system rather than the "profit system," since he who risks his all to launch a new project takes a chance of dropping it as well as of winning. Just as no businesses could ever be developed, to make jobs for employees, except through such courageous chance-taking, so nothing can be gained in contract bridge except by venturing of one kind or another.

Joseph Rooney, 8, lost a tooth and was mighty proud of the defunct chopper, carrying it constantly and showing it as often as opportunity offered. Other attempts at obtaining possession meeting with failure, Joe, the city service director, told his son that when he was a kid and a tooth came out that he put the tooth under his pillow at night and that a fairy would come and replace the tooth with a dime. Seemed like a fair deal to young Joe and he put the tooth under his pillow. The next morning the youngster appeared at breakfast in a high state of elation. In one hand the tooth, in the other a dime. "The good fairy forgot the tooth," he shouted. Then turning to his brother he held out the tooth and in a rush of generosity declared, "You can use it tonight, Patrick."

M. G. Murray, of the home town, and Charles Sherman, a

Winter visitor from New York, won a top on this duplicate deal in one of the tournaments at St. Petersburg, Fla. Sneaking through an early diamond trick enabled Mr. Murray to do it.

West opened the club A and shifted to the spade 3, which the K won to drop the Q. When the dummy 2 was led promptly from dummy, East was certain to be taking a risk, no matter what he did. If he came in with the A, he would set up the Q, perhaps for an important discard of one of South's losers. He knew he was taking still another risk when he played low, as he did.

The K took that trick, and the diamond A was eventually shut out altogether. Mr. Murray followed with the heart A and K, the heart 6 ruffed by the spade 4 to set up the heart remainder, then the spade A and J, leaving the good 10 out. Next he led to the club Q and brought forth the heart 10 from dummy. As he discarded the diamond 6 on it to render East's A worthless, West could get only one trick with his spade 10. The last three tricks went to the spade 6 and 5 and club K, producing an extra trick.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

POIROT'S FACE took on a curious expression. Lynn misunderstood it. She cried out:

"Oh don't you see, M. Poirot, it's all so difficult. It isn't a question of David at all. It's me! I've changed. I've been away for three—four years. Now I've come back. I'm not the same person who went away. That's the tragedy every-where. People coming home changed, having to readjust themselves. You can't go away and lead a different kind of life and not change!"

She stared at him, shaking her head. He insisted:

"But yes, it is so. Why did you go away in the first place?"

"Why? I went into the Wrens. I went on service."

"Yes, yes, but why did you join the Wrens in the first place? You were engaged to be married. You were in love with Rowley Cloade. You could have worked, could you not, as a Land girl, here in Warmley Vale?"

"I could have, I suppose, but I wanted—"

"You wanted to get away. You wanted to go abroad to see life. You wanted, perhaps, to get away from Rowley Cloade. . . . And now, you are restless, you still want—to get away! Oh no, Mademoiselle, people do not change!"

"When I was out East, I longed for home," Lynn cried defensively.

"Yes, yes, where you are not, there you will want to be! That will always be so, perhaps, with you. You make a picture, to yourself, you see, a picture of Lynn Marchmont coming home. . . . But the picture does not come true, because the Lynn Marchmont whom you imagine is not the real Lynn Marchmont. She is the Lynn Marchmont you would like to be."

Lynn asked bitterly:

"So, according to you, I shall never be satisfied anywhere?"

"I do not say that. But I do say that, when you went away, you were dissatisfied with your engagement, and that now you have come back, you are still dissatisfied with your engagement."

Lynn said sharply:

"You mean David, don't you? You think I am in love with David?"

"That is for you to say," murmured Poirot discreetly.

"And I—don't know! There's something in David that I'm afraid of—but there's something that draws me, too. . . ." She was silent.

"It is my métier," said Poirot modestly. "There is a further truth, I think, that you have not yet recognized."

Lynn said sharply:

"You think I am in love with David?"

"That is for you to say," murmured Poirot discreetly.

a moment and then went on: "I was talking yesterday to his Brigadier. He came down here when he heard David was arrested to see what he could do. He's been telling me about David, how incredibly daring he was. He said David was one of the bravest people he'd ever had under him. And yet, you know, M. Poirot, in spite of all he said and his praise, I don't want to see David. I don't want the feeling that he wasn't sure, not absolutely sure that David hadn't done this!"

"And you are not sure, either?"

Lynn gave a crooked rather pathetic smile.

"No—you see, I've never trusted David. Can you love someone you don't trust?"

"Unfortunately, yes."

"I've always been unfair to David—because I didn't trust him. I've believed quite a lot of the local gossip—hints that David wasn't David Hunter at all—but just a boy friend of Rosaleen's. I was ashamed when I met the Brigadier and he talked to me about having known David as a boy in Ireland."

"C'est épatant," murmured Poirot, "how people can get hold of the wrong end of a stick!"

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. Tell me, did Mrs. Cloade, the doctor's wife, I mean, did she ring you up on the night of the murder?"

"What about?"

"Some incredible muddle she had got into over some accounts."

"Did she speak from her own house?"

"Why, no, actually her telephone was out of order. She had to go out to a call box."

"At ten minutes past ten?"

"Thereabouts. Our clocks never keep particularly good time."

"Thereabouts," said Poirot thoughtfully. He went on delicately:

"That was not the only telephone call you had that evening?"

"No," Lynn spoke shortly.

"David Hunter rang you up from London?"

"Yes," she flared out suddenly.

"I suppose you want to know what he said?"

"Oh, indeed I should not presume—"

"You're welcome to know. He said he was going away—clearing out of my life. He said he was no good to me and that he never would run straight—not even for my sake."

"And since that was probably true you did not like it," said Poirot.

"I hope he will go away—that is, if he gets acquitted all right. . . . I hope they'll both go away to America or somewhere. Then, perhaps, we shall be able to stop thinking about them—we'll learn to stand on our own feet. We'll stop feeling ill will."

"Ill will?"

"Yes, I felt it first one night at Aunt Kathie's. She gave a sort of party. Perhaps it was because I was just back from abroad and rather on edge—but I seemed to feel it in the air eddying all round us. Ill will to her—to Rosaleen. I don't you see, we were wishing her dead—all of us! Wishing her dead. . . . And that's awful, to wish that someone who's never done you any harm—may die—"

"Her death, of course, is the only thing that can do you any good," Poirot spoke in a brisk and practical tone.

"You mean do us good financially? Her mere being here has done us harm in all the ways that matter! Envy a person, resenting them, caddling off them—it isn't good for one. Now, there she is, at Furrowbank, all alone. She looks like a ghost—she looks scared to death—she looks—oh! looks as though she's going off her head. And she won't let us help! Not one of us. We've all tried. Mums asked her to come and stay with us, Aunt Frances asked her here. Even Aunt Kathie went along and offered to be with her at Furrowbank. But she won't have anything to do with us now and I don't blame her. She wouldn't even see Brigadier Conroy. I think she's ill, ill with worry and fright and misery. And we're doing nothing about it because she won't let us."

"Have you tried?" You yourself?"

"Yes," said Lynn. "I went up there yesterday. I said, was there anything I could do? She looked at me— Suddenly she broke off and shivered. 'I think she hates me,' she said. 'You least of all. David told her, I think, to stop on at Furrowbank, and she always does what David tells her. Rowley took her up some eggs and butter from Long Willows. I think he's the only one of us she likes. She thanked him and said he'd always been kind. Rowley, of course, is

Bigger Ironing Board Cuts Time Spent On Task

"Double the size of your ironing board to save both time and labor. This wide ironing board, fitted on top of your regular board, is especially good for ironing linens, draperies, men's shirts, and other large pieces.

"It can be put on or taken off the standing board, as needed, and it will save many lifts of the iron and shifts of clothes during ironing." These words of advice are given by a home management specialist, Thelma Beall, of Ohio State university.

A width of 20 inches is suggested for this board by Miss Beall. This is as wide as most women can reach at their proficient ironing an upright position. For comfortable, efficient ironing an upright posture is necessary, even while reaching the full width of the board. This allows free movement without strain on neck, arms, or back.

The length of the board should be about 42 inches or slightly longer than the board on which it fits. One end may be taped for convenience in slipping clothes over it.

To make this large-sized board, cut the board from 3/4-inch plywood or 5-ply wall board. Fasten wooden cleats on the underside to clamp it to the standard ironing board. To hold it more firmly, wooden buttons may be screwed on the cleats so the buttons may be turned to clamp on the under board.

Miss Beall says, "Women who have made tests with the wide board in their homes report that it saved 15 percent of the time previously spent on their weekly ironing. For instance, on this 20-inch wide surface, a man's shirt is moved only three times in ironing."

The drainage system of the Americas is the greatest on earth. The Amazon river discharges more water into the ocean than the eight largest rivers of Asia together. The Mississippi river discharges more water than all the rivers of Europe.

Ashville Church Scene Of Wedding Thursday Evening

Huckleberry foliage, palms and fern, surrounding a sunburst of white gladioli and lighted tapers, decorated the altar of Ashville First English Lutheran church for the wedding of Miss Ellen Carolyn Johnson and John Norman Bowers.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Peter Johnson of Ashville. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Bowers of Laurelville.

The Rev. Chester O. Holmquist, pastor of the church, officiated for the ceremony at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Given in marriage by her brother, Peter Conrad Johnson, the bride repeated nuptial vows in an heirloom candlelight satin gown, designed on classic lines. The bodice was designed with a heart shaped neckline edged in handmade satin roses while the full skirt extended into a long cathedral train.

The long fitted sleeves ended in points over the hands. Pinned to one sleeve was the traditional fleur-de-lis of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority of which the bride is a member.

Miss Virginia Baum of Ashville served as maid of honor in a pale yellow satin dress. Her flowers were gladioli shading from flame to bronze.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Marianne Messmer of Columbus and Miss Ruth Bowers of Laurelville wore similar gowns of moss-green satin. Their bouquets were of flame colored gladioli.

David Templeton of Columbus was best man. Groomsman were brothers of the bridegroom, Richard and Robert Bowers.

A reception immediately followed in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Johnson received her guests in a royal-blue dinner gown. Mrs. Bowers, mother of the bridegroom, chose to wear a russet gown. Both mothers had corsages of white gladioli.

Assisting hostesses at the reception were Miss Sybil Gramlick, Miss Nancy Spohn and Miss Mary Lou Thomas.

The bride changed to a two-toned grey suit, grey accessories and pinned an orchid at her lapel when the couple left for an undisclosed destination.

Bigger Ironing Board Cuts Time Spent On Task

"Double the size of your ironing board to save both time and labor. This wide ironing board, fitted on top of your regular board, is especially good for ironing linens, draperies, men's shirts, and other large pieces.

"It can be put on or taken off the standing board, as needed, and it will save many lifts of the iron and shifts of clothes during ironing." These words of advice are given by a home management specialist, Thelma Beall, of Ohio State university.

A width of 20 inches is suggested for this board by Miss Beall. This is as wide as most women can reach at their proficient ironing an upright position. For comfortable, efficient ironing an upright posture is necessary, even while reaching the full width of the board. This allows free movement without strain on neck, arms, or back.

The length of the board should be about 42 inches or slightly longer than the board on which it fits. One end may be taped for convenience in slipping clothes over it. To make this large-sized board, cut the board from 1/2-inch plywood or 5-ply wall board. Fasten wooden cleats on the underside to clamp it to the standard ironing board. To hold it more firmly, wooden buttons may be screwed on the cleats so the buttons may be turned to clamp on the under board.

Miss Beall says, "Women who have made tests with the wide board in their homes report that it saved 15 percent of the time previously spent on their weekly ironing. For instance, on this 20-inch wide surface, a man's shirt is moved only three times in ironing."

The drainage system of the Americas is the greatest on earth. The Amazon river discharges more water into the ocean than the eight largest rivers of Asia together. The Mississippi river discharges more water than all the rivers of Europe.

Ashville Church Scene Of Wedding Thursday Evening

Huckleberry foliage, palms and fern, surrounding a sunburst of white gladioli and lighted tapers, decorated the altar of Ashville First English Lutheran church for the wedding of Miss Ellen Carolyn Johnson and John Norman Bowers.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Peter Johnson of Ashville. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Bowers of Laurelville.

The Rev. Chester O. Holmquist, pastor of the church, officiated for the ceremony at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Given in marriage by her brother, Peter Conrad Johnson, the bride repeated nuptial vows in an heirloom candlelight satin gown, designed on classic lines. The bodice was designed with a heart shaped neckline edged in handmade satin roses while the full skirt extended into a long cathedral train.

The long fitted sleeves ended in points over the hands. Pinned to one sleeve was the traditional fleur-de-lis of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority of which the bride is a member.

Miss Virginia Baum of Ashville served as maid of honor in a pale yellow satin dress. Her flowers were gladioli shading from flame to bronze.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Marianne Messmer of Columbus and Miss Ruth Bowers of Laurelville were similar in gowns of moss-green satin. Their bouquets were of flame colored gladioli.

David Templeton of Columbus was best man. Groomsman were Richard and Robert Bowers.

A reception immediately followed in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Johnson received her guests in a royal-blue dinner gown. Mrs. Bowers, mother of the bridegroom, chose to wear a cerise gown. Both mothers had corsages of white gladioli.

Assisting hostesses at the reception were Miss Sybil Gramlick, Miss Nancy Spohn and Miss Mary Lou Thomas.

The bride changed to a two-toned grey suit, grey accessories and pinned an orchid at her lapel when the couple left for an undisclosed destination.

After Oct. 1, Mr. and Mrs. Bowers will make a home in

One of the boasts of the New Deal has been that it is able to maintain a balanced economy—a boast that is not precisely correct. Granting their claims, no one need be grateful about it because, as public officials, they do what they are hired to do.

Mr. Truman's claim for gratitude is then untenable. Certainly farmers who vote for or against Mr. Truman are not "the most ungrateful people in the world." They are only American citizens exercising their right to vote in a free and secret election according to their consciences and in the interest of their country. And the same is true of labor.

Mr. Truman's choice of words may not have been precisely what he meant to say. He spoke extemporaneously and under great strain. But the President of the United States should not stoop to the vulgarity of "You know me, boys!"

Production of pig iron was 696,000 net tons in the United States in 1948. The same amount could be made, at the 1947 production rate, in less than one week.

Leeks, first known in the Mediterranean countries, have been grown since prehistoric times.

WILLIAMS STILL GIVEN NOD

Flores' Style Is Liked By Oldtime Ring Experts

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—The fighter oldtimers talk about with glowing praise is Jess Flores, the Mexican from Stockton, Cal.

He challenges for Ike Williams' world lightweight title in Yankee Stadium Sept. 23. Flores doesn't figure to win from the tough and ever-willing champion, but it should be a flashy battle.

At $20 tops, the bout, backed up by Ray Robinson's non-title scuffle with Kid Gavilan, figures to attract about $200,000 worth of customers despite the Tournament of Champions counter-attraction two nights earlier at Jersey City.

This one will draw a half million at $40 tops for Tony Zale's against Marcel Cerdan and the 15-round semi-final between Jersey Joe Walcott and Gus Lesnevich.

OBVIOUSLY this is the more attractive boxing card, but the old-timers still want to watch Flores go again.

They say he fights like the great oldtimers used to fight. This is a compliment, for the oldtime observers don't think much of present day fighters.

They say that smart boxing is almost a lost art.

They claim that this Flores, at 22 years of age, reminds them of the way the oldtimers used to fight and block and move around. They praise his left hand and his natural ability.

Veteran observers like the famed Dumb Dan Morgan—called dumb because he never stops talking—say that Flores has the classiest left hand in the business today.

If he is so crackling good he should be the favorite over Williams, shouldn't he? How do you explain that?

You explain it by the fact that Williams is a good rugged fighter who is tremendously effective, but lacking in the flash of the young Californian.

Flores has that oldtime flash and may yet become a great fighter because he does everything so well. He has had only 50 fights. A few more on the big time will give him the necessary experience.

As for Williams, he is a good tough fellow who takes on all comers as fast as they show up. His bout with Flores will be his third defense in three successive fights in a period of four months.

PROBABLY the world's youngest golfer is Robert Mallick, Jr., 2, of Coraopolis Heights, near Pittsburgh, Pa. Top—Bobby tees up. Bottom—Bobby blasts way out of sandtrap. Note his excellent form—keeping his head down and eye on where ball was. (International)

Hoosier Futurity Is Grabbed By Sandusky Pacer

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 11—Grand Circuit harness racing at the Indiana State Fair went into the records books today for another year with Theo A. Abbe as the winner of the $8,026 Hoosier Futurity for 2-year-old pacers.

The bay colt, owned by Theo A. Hilt of Sandusky and driven by Gabe Cartnall, was forced to go three heats before capturing the trophy.

The Ward Brothers' Larry Grattan, piloted by Eddie Leonard, won the first heat in 2:06, but Theo A. Abbe won the next two in 2:06 2-5 and 2:10 2-5.

Doc Marshall of Urbana drove Golden Mile of Hayes Fair Acres to third place behind Larry Grattan.

Little Judy was reined under the wire by W. Beattie at the head of the field in all three heats of the free-for-all pace.

Harry Whitney piloted Overlord, owned by F. Ambrose Clark of Old Westbury, L. I., to victory in the $3,000 Indiana Stake 2nd Class Trot by winning the third and fourth heats.

The $7,500 24 Class Trot went to Oscar Hanover, from the Resnick Cleaners of Washington, Pa., and driven by Frank Ervin.

Football Clinic To Be Staged Here Sept. 21

Circleville football fans are to get the "inside information" on this year's rules and regulations Sept. 21 when Coaches Steve Brudzinski and Tom Bennett hold a football clinic on the Circleville gridiron.

Tentative plans for the night calls for a reserve football game between Circleville and either Logan or Hamilton Township schools, followed by the clinic.

The clinic, sponsored by the Circleville Booster Club, is to contain explanations of rules, referees' signals and the strategy of different line and backfield formations.

Lowly Rockets Finally Zoom Into Big Time

CHICAGO, Sept. 11—It took three years, three sets of owners, lots of coaches and dozens of players, but the Chicago Rockets have finally become a major league football club.

The Rockets, quoted underdogs officially at 10-1/2 points and unofficially at up to 20, bested bad breaks and defeated the Baltimore Colts, 21 to 14, for their first All-America Football Conference win of the season last night.

The triumph was conceived at the expense of a Baltimore club which already had become this year the only team in AAFC history to beat both the Cleveland Browns and the New York Yankees in the same season.

A running attack headed by Chuck Fennenbock, Dewey Proctor and Eddie Prokop and the quarterbacking of ex-Nebraska Sam Vacanti catapulted the Chicago eleven into a 14-to-0 halftime lead.

The Colts struck with marked vigor as the second half opened. One march ended when A. Y. Little went over on a quarterback sneak.

IN THE FINAL period, the Colts tied the count at 14-all when Little passed half the length of the field to Lamar Davis.

Then it was that the Rockets proved themselves big league. A march to the one-foot line ended in a fumble but they

In the western division, Racine, winner of the sectional title for the second straight year, entertains Hammond, Ind., and Rock Island plays at Iowa City. All playoff series are on a best-of-five basis.

Trenton Claims Legion Title

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 11—The undefeated Trenton, N. J., baseball team was hailed today as the 1948 champion of the American Legion junior world series.

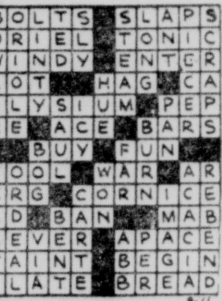

Young Don Minnick, who hasn't lost a game all season, hurled his third straight tournament victory here last night to defeat Jacksonville, Fla., by a 4-to-1 score.

surged back—only to miss on an offside penalty on Elroy Hirsch's 25-year off-tackle slant for a tally.

The Rockets kept coming back for more and this time they hit pay dirt for good. Prokop carried the load down to the one-yard stripe and Vacanti piled over.

All Of Last Year's County Polio Victims Back Home

Some Aid Still Needed By Few

Campaign Readied By Local Group

Pickaway County March of Dimes Committee announced Saturday all 17 county youngsters stricken with the dread polio disease last year have been returned to their homes.

The announcement continued that, although a few of the children were still periodically returning to a Columbus hospital for treatment, nearly half of the total stricken last year have almost completely recovered and are leading normal lives.

Don Henkle, chairman of the committee, reviewed last year's committee work and laid the plans for this year's campaign, which will begin in the latter part of January.

Henkle said the March of Dimes committee had spent $17,500 toward hospitalization of the youngsters stricken last year, and was continuing to spend money for the periodical trips.

"FINANCIALLY," said Henkle, "we are now standing in a deep hole. We borrowed $12,000 of the $17,500 spent last year from the national chapter and spent $5,500 from our own fund. "Our proposed $10,000 campaign staged last January fell a little short of the goal. We were given but $7,500 to operate on for the rest of the year. This means we now have only about $2,500 to operate on for five months, while still in debt to the national fund. "A polio outbreak now would entirely eat up our funds and we would be 'borrowing' again."

While eyeing the gloomy future, Henkle and his committee planned for a bigger and better campaign in 1949.

Henkle and his committee have again set the March of Dimes goal at $10,000 next year and plan an intensified program to realize the goal.

House-to-house solicitations are expected to make up the head of the new campaign, followed by "tag" days, theatre collections, industrial and club solicitations, coin cans and perhaps a special show.

THE GIANT "money thermometer," which registered "slightly cool" last year, will again be put up to help the public keep up with the campaign.

Members of the local March of Dimes Committee include Ed Amey, campaign chairman; Vernon Hawkes, industrial solicitations chairman; Harold Watts, business solicitations chairman; Dr. David Goldschmidt, secretary and chairman of organizational solicitations; and Mrs. Hazel Fouch, chairman of theatre collections, house-to-house canvass and "tag" days.

The "Argonauts of '49" was a name applied for the fortune seekers who emigrated to California in the years immediately following the discovery of gold in 1848.

6 Farms, Service Firm Given State Charter

Incorporation of the Dunlap Service Co., Inc., of Williamsport and six company-owned farms was announced Saturday by Agent John H. Dunlap Jr. Legal proceedings were handled by Ballard, Dresbach and Crabbe of Columbus. Papers were filed by three incorporators, Henry S. Ballard, Richard R. Price and J. Dean Strausbaugh.

Under the new setup, the six farms were redistributed and incorporated into two farms each—Deer Creek Farms, Inc., Oak Run Farms, Inc., and Pickaway Farms, Inc.

Officers for the Pickaway and Oak Run Farms are Katherine D. Stone, president; John H. Dunlap Jr., executive vice-president; and Carl Hunsinger, secretary-treasurer.

For the Dunlap Service Co., Inc., and Deer Creek Farms, Inc., the officers are Franz T. Stone, president; Dunlap, executive vice-president; and Hunsinger, secretary-treasurer.

Fairfield Jury Given Recess

LANCASTER, Sept. 11—Fairfield County's "hot ham" grand jury was in recess until Monday today after hearing testimony that seemingly linked gambling to the sale of stolen meat in Lancaster.

A witness at yesterday's secret grand jury session was Carl King, identified by Franklin County Sheriff Ralph J. Paul as the man who asked him to arrange a conference with Gov. Herbert.

Paul said King sought to present gambling information to the governor. When a conference was arranged, however, the man failed to appear.

All Of Last Year's County Polio Victims Back Home

Some Aid Still Needed By Few

Campaign Readied By Local Group

Pickaway County March of Dimes Committee announced Saturday all 17 county youngsters stricken with the dread polio disease last year have been returned to their homes.

The announcement continued that, although a few of the children were still periodically returning to a Columbus hospital for treatment, nearly half of the total stricken last year have almost completely recovered and are leading normal lives.

Don Henkle, chairman of the committee, reviewed last year's committee work and laid the plans for this year's campaign, which will begin in the latter part of January.

Henkle said the March of Dimes committee had spent $17,500 toward hospitalization of the youngsters stricken last year, and was continuing to spend money for the periodical trips.

"FINANCIALLY," said Henkle, "we are now standing in a deep hole. We borrowed $12,000 of the $17,500 spent last year from the national chapter and spent $5,500 from our own fund. Our proposed $10,000 campaign staged last January fell a little short of the goal. We were given but $7,500 to operate on for the rest of the year. This means we now have only about $2,500 to operate on for five months, while still in debt to the national fund."

"A polio outbreak now would entirely eat up our funds and we would be 'borrowing' again."

While eyeing the gloomy future, Henkle and his committee planned for a bigger and better campaign in 1949.

Henkle and his committee have again set the March of Dimes goal at $10,000 next year and plan an intensified program to realize the goal.

House-to-house solicitations are expected to make up the head of the new campaign, followed by "tag" days, theatre collections, industrial and club solicitations, coin cans and perhaps a special show.

THE GIANT "money thermometer," which registered "slightly cool" last year, will again be put up to help the public keep up with the campaign.

Members of the local March of Dimes Committee include Ed Amey, campaign chairman; Vernon Hawkes, industrial solicitations chairman; Harold Watts, business solicitations chairman; Dr. David Goldschmidt, secretary and chairman of organizational solicitations; and Mrs. Hazel Fouch, chairman of theatre collections, house-to-house canvass and "tag" days.

The "Argonauts of '49" was a name applied for the fortune seekers who emigrated to California in the years immediately following the discovery of gold in 1848.

6 Farms, Service Firm Given State Charter

Incorporation of the Dunlap Service Co., Inc., of Williamsport and six company-owned farms was announced Saturday by Agent John H. Dunlap Jr.

Legal proceedings were handled by Ballard, Dresbach and Crabbe of Columbus. Papers were filed by three incorporators, Henry S. Ballard, Richard R. Price and J. Dean Strausbaugh.

Under the new setup, the six farms were redistributed and incorporated into two farms each—Deer Creek Farms, Inc., Oak Run Farms, Inc., and Pickaway Farms Inc.

Officers for the Pickaway and Oak Run Farms are Katherine D. Stone, president; John H. Dunlap Jr., executive vice-president; and Carl Hunsinger, secretary-treasurer.

For the Dunlap Service Co., Inc., and Deer Creek Farms, the officers are Franz T. Stone, president; Dunlap, executive vice-president; and Hunsinger, secretary-treasurer.

Fairfield Jury Given Recess

LANCASTER, Sept. 11—Fairfield County's "hot ham" grand jury was in recess until Monday today after hearing testimony that seemingly linked gambling to the sale of stolen meat in Lancaster.

Paul said King sought to present gambling information to the governor. When a conference was arranged, however, the man failed to appear.
